Perpetrators caught; marine law in East Kalimantan now institutionalized and sustainable, driven by local institutions.

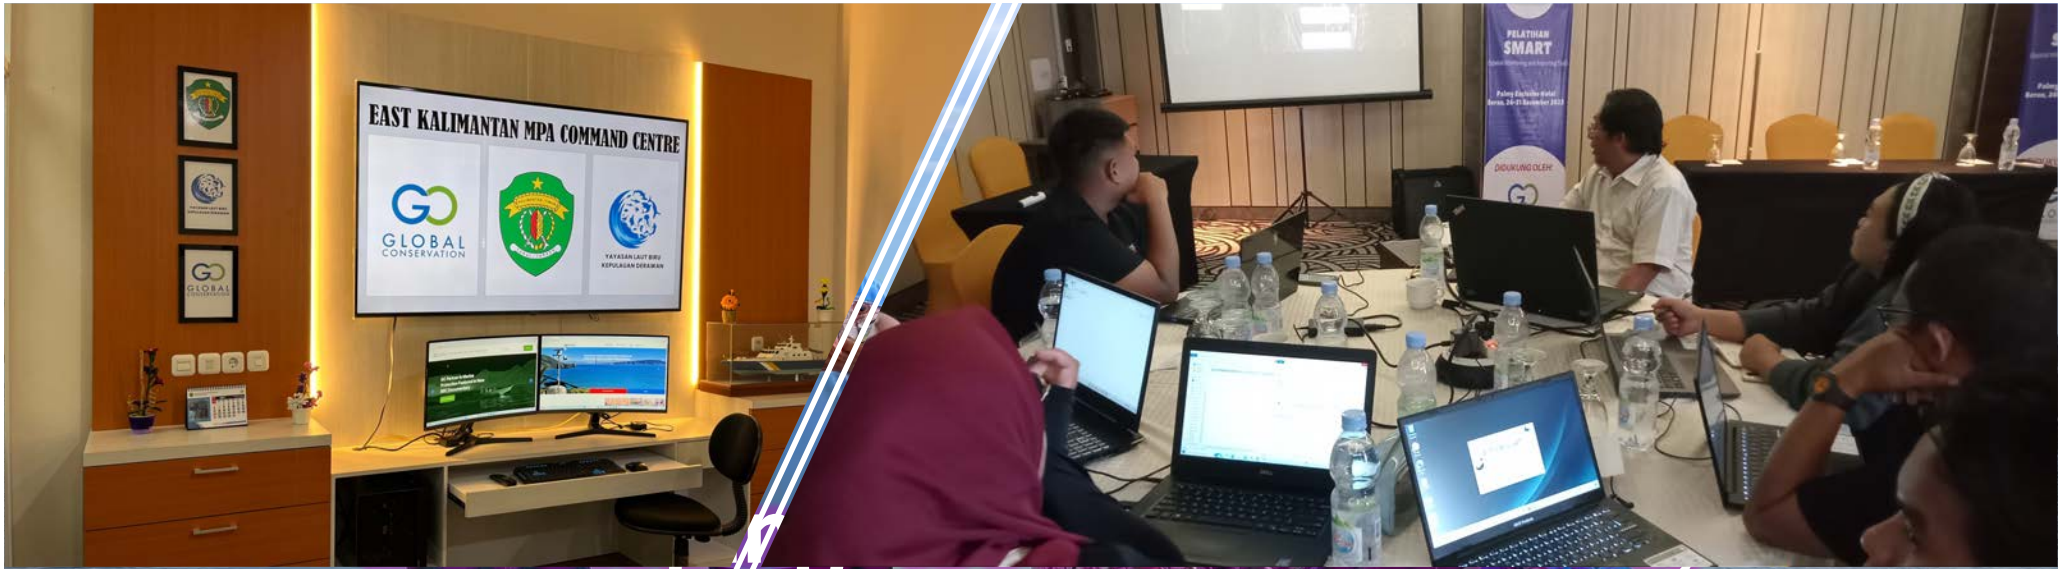

brought together local fishers, tourism operators, marine police, navy, fisheries supervisors, and youth groups to collectively safeguard this fragile ecosystem

A man with dark hair, wearing a black t-shirt, is smiling and holding two large, patterned lobsters, one in each hand. He is standing in what appears to be a fishery or aquaculture facility. In the background, there are wooden structures, green foliage, and large blue and red plastic tubs. A yellow plastic basket is visible on the left. The scene is brightly lit, suggesting an outdoor or semi-outdoor environment.
